Ask Auntie Karana

Q. I have a client who has a history of low back pain for the past six months. This pain is in her right hip and it radiates down her right leg. An X-ray of the pelvis and an MRI of the same region showed that the source of her pain was related to degeneration of lumbar intervertebral disc and compression causing pinched nerves. Physical therapy was helpful in alleviating some of the pain but it still persisted and eventually she agreed to have steroid injections in the affected areas of the lumbar and sacral spine. These injections have provided better than 50% improvement in the pain. When doing her exercises at home two to three times per week and taking yoga classes, her pain is manageable. However, with age it seems as though the degeneration and subsequent compression will progress and more injections and eventual surgery might be necessary.

This client retired recently, and bought a lovely house in a small rural community. This had been her dream. She now feels stuck and burdened by the lifestyle that she has set up for herself. She is motivated to do PT exercises and yoga since they both help, however, she feels angry that she is restricted in her physical and social activities. How can I support this client further in addition to her current regimen?

A. Low back pain caused by spinal stenosis is a very common condition in older adults. It's usually caused by the physical stresses of daily living, such as lifting, twisting, running etc. Other emotional causes could be feeling unsupported and issues around money.

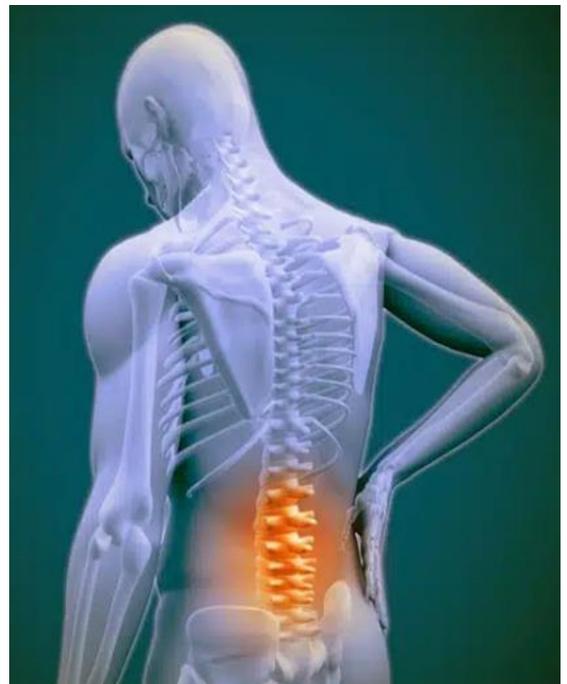

The spine is governed by the Basic Center and also related to the Alta Major at the top of the spine which governs the spinal cord. After commencing a session, I recommend doing the Lower triangle of vitality and the Lower triangle of prana, prior to addressing the spine. The Spine protocol can then be used to scan and balance the spine. While scanning the spine (in the direction from coccyx to the base of the skull), find where it feels restricted.

The Sacral center is associated with Lumbar segments and Sacral joints. Remember to assess/balance the nervous system and include the Fear and Courage triangles. Add the fear points to help clear any repressed feelings. Have the client visualize her spine being energized and balanced.

Encourage her to exercise regularly to keep the energy flowing.

Note: The Lifestream Journal, Spring 2023 issue (Volume 13 No.1) features The Cranial Sacral Dural System, by Nell Weast. This article includes the Dural Membrane Balancing Protocol which can help address the issue of low back pain.

DK's Triangle Project

I am an INEH teacher and an Esoteric Astrologer. Moreover, I am a new professional member of NAEH. I cherish the project of making a compilation of the triangles proposed by Master DK in the 24 books he gave us. The idea came to me while reading Esoteric Astrology, when I found a triangle there, for my Esoteric Healing practice. I said to myself that maybe we would discover treasures within the other blue books, as well. But 24 books to review is a lot for one person. But together, with volunteers from INEH and NAEH, it is possible! The idea is to identify the triangles within each book, then copy and paste the relevant context. I suggest we use the search mode to save time. We could also occasionally connect as a group through Zoom to talk about the project. I reviewed the book "Esoteric Healing" and other volunteers have pledged to review "New Age Education," Esoteric Psychology I and II and "White Magic." All NAEH as well as INEH members are encouraged to contribute, since this compilation of DK's triangles will be offered to both associations. If you are interested in this collaborative adventure, please get in touch with me, in pleasure of service.

Looking for a Leader for 2024 NAEH Book Circle Gatherings

The discussions for our Book Circle gatherings are lively, enjoyable, and thought provoking. As life-long learners, we all know there is much knowledge to be explored and appreciated and the Book Circle is a fun way to share experiences, perspectives, and information.

The Book Circle is looking for a new leader to have a turn in leading these once every two month gatherings beginning January 2024.

This Book Circle was initiated and has been actively led by Susan Linz, PhD, CHt, CPEH, since 2022. Books are chosen based on participant preferences and meetings are on the last Sunday every other month from 4:30-6:00 pm ET on Zoom. For 2023 the remaining gatherings are in July, September, and November. Books selected for discussion are posted at least a month in advance on the NAEH website calendar, with additional announcements included in the NAEH class offerings emails.

Susan will complete her volunteer efforts with the Book Circle at the end of 2023. If you would like to step forward to lead the Book Circle, please contact any member of the NAEH Education Committee, or the NAEH Board to volunteer. If you do not have a Zoom account that allows for more than a 45 minute group meeting, NAEH can help with that.

Being the leader of this group entails soliciting book titles and selecting books for discussion, and then providing the appropriate information to the NAEH administrator in a timely manner so that it may be included on the website calendar and in the class announcement emails. Two months advance notification gives participants a chance to obtain and read the book before that gathering. Additional email reminders with the Zoom link information and posting on the NAEH Facebook page also seems appreciated by participants. As the gathering 'host', you will need to arrange for the Angel Card drawing and opening meditation (if you elect to continue these aspects).
